The Lincolnshire Wolds

The Lincolnshire Wolds is a nationally important and cherished landscape. Most of it was designated an Area of Outstanding Natural Beauty (AONB) in 1973. Covering an area of 558 square kilometres or 216 square miles, the AONB contains the highest ground in eastern England between 'Yorkshire and Kent, rising to over 150m along its western edge. Rolling chalk hills and areas of sandstone and clay underlie this attractive landscape.

The Lincolnshire Wolds have been inhabited since prehistoric times and the appearance of the countryside today has been greatly influenced by past and present agricultural practices.

A Countryside Service helps to protect and enhance the landscape through partnership projects with local landowners, farmers, parish councils, businesses and residents of the Wolds.

The route is waymarked with a leaping trout symbol.

Start the walk at the old Vine Inn and head towards St. Andrew’s Church, post The Old Rectory, a fine example of the work of the architect S. S. Teulon.

St. Andrew’s Church

Built from 1735-8 on the site of an earlier medieval church, St. Andrew’s is a simple Georgian church.

Cross the field on your left, keeping to the left and noting the remains of the deserted medieval village. Go over Caloby Beck and cross the next field using the boardwalks. This is an important boggy habitat for marshy plants such as lady’s smock and meadowsweet, and for birds such as snipe and lapwings.

Both Caloby Beck and Swaby Beck are chalk streams and merge to form The Great Eau, which enters the North Sea at Saltfleet Haven. Chalk streams are internationally rare habitats which support some of our most threatened plants and animals. Eau is a common Lincolnshire word for a watercourse probably from the Anglo-Saxon word for river or stream.

Passing over Swaby Beck the path curves to the left and joins a bridleway. To the left, the path goes through Swaby Valley, a glacial overflow channel. Follow the path to the right, along Green Lane. The copse contains many examples of mature trees and the hedge has fine field maple, which were once laid as part of the hedge. At the road turn left and walk down the hill to Bolsover Bridge Trout Farm and enter the field opposite.

To the left one stands South Thoresby Hall. The little bridge over the Great Eau is a relic of The Hall, as is the long brick wall in the next field, behind which was the kitchen garden. Herons and kingfishers can be seen near the lake. Proceed past the old wind pump and across the next field and back to the church.

From here you can walk back to the old Vine Inn if you wish or, to complete the full length of the walk, following the footpath to the left, through a garden, over the fields and across the fields to Greenfield Lane.

At Greenfield Lane turn left towards Limespits Farm and at the junction go right up Hough Lane until the footpath is reached. Follow the footpath to the junction with the bridleway. Ahead is Hough Manor Farm, the home of the ancient Bolles family, and to its left hidden from sight, the small and charming church of St. Leonard. Turn up the hill to the right and follow the path. On the way you will pass a Parish boundary marker. This is an excellent spot to appreciate the sweeping views, both of the Wolds and down to the coast.

Continue down to the road and cross it, keeping the hedge on your right and continue down into the woodland. Go through the gate and onto South Thoresby Warren Local Nature Reserve.

The Old Hall

Very little is known about this grand looking building which was demolished in the 1820s. A sketch survives done for Sir Joseph Banks of Revesby indicating that it was a house of some importance. It was the seat of the Wood family who owned most of the Parish of South Thoresby. The dovecote remains, converted into a cottage, demolished in the late 1950s.

The Vine Inn

There has been an inn on this site since 1508. The present building dates from the 18th century and is now a B&B. In the 19th century the innkeeper was also a blacksmith working from the adjacent barn.
