INTRODUCTION

This walk links the quiet villages of Belchford and Scamblesby in the heart of the Lincolnshire Wolds. Enjoy grassy paths, a stream and some fine hilltop views.

There are numerous springs nearby which first attracted Neolithic settlers to the area. Two streams converge here to form the source of the River Waring, which flows to Horncastle to join the River Bain.

Belchford is first recorded as ‘Belchford’ in 1086 and is probably named after a ‘Ford of a man called Belt’. The village is in the centre of an area rich in archaeological finds, from ancient flint arrowheads to Neolithic polished stone axes.

Until relatively recently this was a sheep grazing area with wool being of great importance to the local economy. Since the 1939-45 war, wheat, barley, oil seed rape and sugar beet have been extensively cultivated.

The South Wolds Hunt’s Opening Meet (the first of the season) always starts at the Blue Bell Inn on the old village green. The building opposite the pub was once the village smithy.

The barn owl is a common sight around the area. It can often be seen in broad daylight, flitting along hedges and rough grassland hunting for voles.

The sharp-eyed might spot a speckled wood butterfly on a summer day near Belchford Wood. Look out for the plant Jack-go-to-bed-at-noon, also called goat’s-beard.

Other birds that may be seen include lapwings, skylarks and yellowhammers.

The walk is mainly on paths and tracks, with some stiles and slopes. Allow 2½ - 3 hours walking at a leisurely pace. The paths can be muddy, so stout shoes or boots are recommended. For times of buses to Belchford, phone Traveline 0871 200 22 33 www.traveline.info

This walk is on Ordnance Survey Explorer map 273. Don’t forget to follow the Countryside Code wherever you go - respect, protect, enjoy.
The route is waymarked with a blue bell symbol.

Start the walk on the footpath beside The Bungalow on Main Road. To reach the start, with the Blue Bell Inn behind you, turn right down Main Road. The bungalow and footpath are on your right.

The outward half of the walk follows the Viking Way.

The Viking Way is a 147 miles long distance footpath running from the Humber to Oakham in Rutland.

Walk along the field edges, cross the footbridge over the River Wating 5 and continue along the public footpath with hedges on both sides.

Jucintrop Mill 6 is on your right. Some believed this unusual wedge-shaped mound was a Neolithic longbarrow. It is however a type of limestone outcrop - called roachstone. Roachstone is a rock formed of harder material than the underlaying sandy clay and limestone, and so weathered more slowly, leaving strange looking hillocks. (There is no public access to Jucintrop Mill itself.)

Belchford Wood 7 is an ancient semi-natural woodland, which is carpeted in spring with bluebells beneath the ash and oak trees. There is no access to the woodland.

As you go past Belchford Wood you have good views northwards over Scamblesby and to the preserved World War II mast at RAF Stenigot. This was one of the country's first radar stations, coming in to operation at the beginning of the war.

Go through several gates, following the Viking Way downhill to join a farm track, then a metalled road.

Folwell Mill Lane 8 towards Scamblesby to a public footpath on your left, just past the farm house on your left, opposite White House Farm. (If you reach a road junction, you have gone too far.)

If you need refreshments, continue straight ahead to the Green Man Inn, with its unusual sign. Raccoon your steps to rejoin the walk.

Follow the track through Flintwood Farm where, in the field to your left, numerous ponds have been created and trees and wild grasses have been planted and sown to create a wildlife haven (there is no access to this area). Continue downhill until you reach Main Road. Turn left and return to the start.

The Lincolnshire Wolds

The Lincolnshire Wolds is a nationally important and cherished landscape. Most of it was designated an Area of Outstanding Natural Beauty (AONB) in 1973. Covering an area of 558 square kilometres or 216 square miles, the AONB contains the highest ground in eastern England between Yorkshire and Kent, rising to over 150m along its western edge. Rolling chalk hills and areas of sandstone and clay underlie this attractive landscape.

The Lincolnshire Wolds has been inhabited since prehistoric times and the appearance of the countryside today has been greatly influenced by past and present agricultural practices.

A Countryside Service helps to protect and enhance the landscape through partnership projects with local landowners, farmers, parish councils, businesses and residents of the Wolds.

The Lincolnshire Rising 1536

In 1536 Henry VIII persuaded Parliament to pass a Bill authorising the dissolution of the smaller monasteries. Nicholas Leach, the rector of Belchford, fearing the loss of church treasures and extra taxes to pay, marched with his brother and 3,000 men on Lincoln. The rebellion quickly collapsed - Nicholas was hung, drawn and quartered at Tyburn for treason.
